INTRODUCTION.

THE following tables are termed "Sketches," as they do not pretend to give a complete genealogy of the family of which James Allen was the progenitor. Thus, of the nine children of James, I have taken only one, Joseph, the youngest son of James. And of the ten sons and two daughters of Joseph, I have attempted to trace the line of descent only through five of his sons. And, though I have sought information through such sources as were accessible, I have not been able to obtain complete and satisfactory answers relating to those five.

The work, imperfect as it is, has cost me not a little labor. Yet that labor has not been a task, but a pastime; occupying some of my leisure hours, at an age when we live more in the past than in the future, or even in the present. I now commend it to the favor of the prolific family that can trace their descent from their common progenitor, JAMES ALLEN, of Medfield.

Note. — The Roman letters indicate the generation; James being the first [I.], Joseph the second [II.], &c.

The numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, &c., indicate the members of one entire family, or the children of the same parents.

The descendants of each of the five sons of Joseph are grouped together, so that the line of descent can be traced from each, independent of the others.

GENEALOGY.

JAMES ALLEN, the progenitor of the Allen Family of Medfield, came over, with his wife Anna, in 1639 [freeman in 1647], and settled in Dedham; of which town his cousin, John Allin, was the first minister. Here he lived about ten years; and here, Dec. 4, 1639, his eldest son, John, was born.

James was one of a company formed, in 1649, to found a settlement in the western part of Dedham, bordering on Charles River, which, the following year, was incorporated by the name of "Medfield." The company consisted of fifty persons, each of whom was to have a house-lot of not more than twelve acres of upland, and as many of meadow. Other grants were subsequently made, which, together with purchases from time to time, constituted the Allen farm, which has remained in the family more than two hundred years, and is now in the possession of descendants of James, of the sixth and seventh generation.

That James was a relative of Rev. John Allin, appears from the following clause in the last will and testament of the latter: "I give and bequeath to my cousin James Allin, of Medfield, twenty shillings," &c. The will was made Aug. 23, 1671, three days before his death, which took place Aug. 26, 1671, at the age of seventy-five.

Note. - Rev. John Allin was born in 1596; came over and settled in Dedham in 1637, of which town he became the pastor in 1639. "He had," says Cotton Mather, "an easy sickness of ten days. His beloved wife Katherine died three days after, and they were both buried in the same grave." She was his second wife, the widow of Governor Thomas Dudley, and was married to Rev. John Allin, Nov. 8, 1653, only three months after the death of Governor Dudley. and a little more than six months after the death of Margaret his first wife. By his second wife, he had three sons, - Benjamin, Daniel, and Eliezer. Rev. John Allen was from Wrentham, Suffolk County, England, which name was given to a part of Dedham.

In the old records, the name is spelled variously, — Allen, Allin, and Alin.

- I. James, by his wife Anna, had nine children: -
 - 1. John, b. in Dedham, Dec. 4, 1639.
 - 2. James, b. in Medfield; m. Lydia Adams.
 - 3. NATHANIEL, m. Mary Frizwell in 1673; had nine children, viz., Samuel, Nathaniel, James, John, Mary, Ann, Ebenezer, Sarah Benjamin, and Edward.
 - 4. WILLIAM, who had Mary and William. besides two who died in infancy.
 - 5. Benjamin, who had Benjamin, Mary, and Lydia.
 - 6. Martha, m. William Sabine, of Seekonk, R.I., Dec. 22, 1663.
 - 7. Mary, m. Joseph Clark, of Medfield.
 - 8. SARAH, m. Domingo White, in 1666.
 - 9. Joseph, b. June 24, 1652; m. Hannah Sabine, of Seekonk.
- II. Joseph, by his wife Hannah, had twelve children; viz.:-
 - 1. Joseph, b. Dec. 19, 1676.
 - 2. Hannah, b. 1679.
 - 3. Daniel, b. 1681; } removed to Pomfret, Conn. 4. David, b. 1683; }

 - 5. Noah, b. April 21, 1685; m. Sarah Gay, of Dedham.

- 6. Clieser, b. 1688; m. Mary Battelle, of Dover.
- 7. Jeremiah, b. 1690; not married.
- 8. Bezekiah, b. 1692.
- 9. Abigail, b. 1694.
- 10. Nehemiah, bap. May 21, 1699.
- 11 and 12. THANKFUL and MARY.

Of these twelve children of Joseph and Hannah Allen, I have been able to obtain reliable information of only four, — Noah, Eliezer, Hezekiah, and Nehemiah, — with a brief account of Joseph, the eldest son.

- III. JOSEPH ALLEN, Jr., married, Nov. 4, 1701, Miriam Wight, of Medfield, by whom he had
 - 1. Joseph, 3d, bap. Aug. 16, 1702.
 - 2. Miriam, bap. May 27, 1704; d. March 3, 1727-8.
 - 3. Moses, bap. Sept. 20, 1708.
 - 4. Aaron, bap. March 11, 1715-6.

The above-named sons of Joseph Allen, Jr., — viz., Joseph Allen, 3d, Moses, and Aaron, — about the year 1736 removed, with their uncle Nehemiah, to Sturbridge; two of whom, Joseph and Moses, were town-officers the year following the incorporation of that town, 1738.

Another of the progenitors of the Allens of Sturbridge was Isaac Allen, also from Medfield.

- IV. Joseph Allen, 3d, before his removal to Sturbridge, married, Dec. 18, 1727, Sarah Parker, to whom were born, in Medfield, two sons and one daughter.
 - 1. Asa, b. Feb. 18, 1729.
 - 2. Olive, b. April 2, 1732.
 - 3. Joseph, b. July 6, 1734.

Note. — The following instrument, found among the old papers that have been preserved, shows that one of the sons of Joseph Allen, Sr., viz., Daniel, lived in Pomfret, near Woodstock, Conn.:—

"Know all men by these presents, that I, Daniel Allen, of Pomfret, in the County of Windham, Conn., having received of my brother Noah Allen, of Medfield, the sum of six pounds in bills of credit, upon which account I do acquit and discharge the estate of my honored father Joseph Allen, and the estate of my brother Jeremiah

Allen; having received my full share, to my content and satisfaction. I do discharge my brother Noah Allen, his heirs and assigns, from any further legacy to pay to me upon the above said account; whereto I have set my hand and seal, this second day of June, 1735.

(Signed) DANIEL ALLEN."

From another old document, it appears, that, in 1731, Joseph Lawrence, of Pomfret, and his wife Mary [probably a sister of Daniel], sold a parcel of land in Medfield, near "Warren Lot," to Noah Allen, which remained for many years a part of the Allen estate.

It appears, moreover, that Joseph Allen, Sr., gave to his two sons, Daniel and David, a hundred acres of land in a place called "Massamoquit, near Woodstock, Conn., where they settled, and probably had families, who extended the name in that neighborhood. I learn, from Ezra Dean, Esq., of Woodstock, who married a grand-daughter of Jacob Allen, Jr., that David Allen lived in Ashford, Conn., whose sons—Solomon, David, and Zechariah—died many years since. Mr. Dean's grandmother, Jemima, was a sister of this David Allen. They died some sixty years since.

- III. Noah, the fourth son of Joseph Allen, Sr., by his wife Sarah [Gay] Allen, had seven children:—
 - 1. Sarah, b. 1714; m. Joshua Boyden, of Medfield.
 - 2. Thankful, b. 1718; m. Seth Clark, of Medfield.
 - 3. Noah, bap. Nov. 8, 1719; m. Miriam Fisher.
 - 4. Jeremiah, bap. Oct. 8, 1720; unmarried.

 - 6. Julia E., b. June 17, 1846.
 - 7. Adelaide M., b. July 9, 1851.
 - 8. CAROLINE A., b. Feb. 11, 1854.

Giles Waldo enlisted in the war of the Rebellion, was taken prisoner, confined in Salisbury Prison, and died soon after his return home, March, 1865, from the effects of ill-treatment and starvation.

Liberty Allen lives on the old homestead in Sturbridge, where had lived his father Henry and his grandfather Abner.

- IV. Abigail, only daughter of Nehemiah, who was married to Aaron, son of Isaac Allen, had eleven children:—
 - 1. Reuben, b. 1764; d., in Sturbridge, in 1818.
 - 2. Amy, b. 1766; died young.
 - 3. Sibbil, b. 1768.
 - 4. Lors, b. 1770.

- 5. Kias, b. 1772; m. Polly Bracket. He died in 1851; she, in 1849.
- 6. Betsey, b. 1774.
- 7. Ethan, b. 1776; d. 1811.
- 8. Mary, b. 1778.
- 9. AARON, b. 1781; d. 1818.
- 10. Nabby, b. 1783; d. 1787.
- 11. Amy, b. 1787.

Of these eleven children of Abigail, the eldest,

V. Reuven had six children; viz .: --

- 1. Perley, b. June 1, 1792; d. Oct. 22, 1865; deacon of the Congregational Church in Sturbridge.
- 2. ABIGAIL, b. 1794; m. Silas Marsh.
- 3. Reuben, b. 1798; d. 1803.
- 4. Melvin, b. 1800; m. Sally Upliam.
- 5. Luther, b. 1802; d. 1863.
- 6. ELVIRA, b. 1805.
- V. Bias, another son of Abigail and Aaron Allen, had five children:
 - 1. Arvina, b. 1807.
 - 2. Reuben, b. 1809; m. Harriet J. Moore.
 - 3. Ethan, b. 1813; m. Mary E. Kimball.
 - 4. Orrin, b. 1816; died in infancy.
 - 5. Aaron, b. 1820.

I give below another account of the descendants of Abigail and Aaron Allen, furnished me by Benjamin D. Allen, of Worcester, one of their lineal descendants.

aar

- IV. Abigail, by her husband Isaac Allen, had eight // children:—
 - 1. AARON, whose children were Reuben, Ethan, Aaron, Betsey, Lois, and Amy.

- Simeon, m. Sarah Puffer, whose daughter Desire m. William Lombard.
- 3. ITHAMAR, had four children, Nathan, Richard, Amy, and Dolly.
- CALEB, m. Rhoda Allen. Their children were five, — Delight, Arba, Albon, Adassa, and Pallace.
- 5. Elisha.
- 6. ELIZABETH, m. John Allen.
- 7. PRUDENCE, m. Mark Stacey.
- 8. Thankful.

Of these eight children, the fifth,

V. Elisha had eight children; viz .: -

- Oren, b. April 10, 1786; d. Jan. 31, 1814; a physician in Warren.
- Walter, b. March 22, 1788; m. Harriet Holbrook, d. May 11, 1833.
- 3. THANKFUL, b. July 22, 1790; lives in Worcester.
- 4. CYLENDA, b. April 6, 1792; d. Oct. 5, 1826.
- Calista, b. Nov. 10, 1795; m. Pardon Thompson, of Manlius, N.Y. Calista died July 7, 1831.
- ALVAN, b. Nov. 13, 1798; m. Lucy Salisbury. Lived in Worcester; where he died Nov. 29, 1859.
- Martha B., b. Dec. 20, 1800; m. Alfred Hitchcock, of Brimfield.
- 8. Elisha Dwight, b. March 27, 1804; m. Orril Merrick.

Of these eight, Dr. Oren Allen was never married. Walter had two sons. Dwight and George, the former of whom had eight children, — Caroline, Mary, Frederic, Francis, Alfred, Martha, Charles, and Mary: the latter, George, had six; viz., Mary, Dwight, Charles, George, Julia, and John.

- VI. Alban, the sixth child of Elisha, had two sons;
 - Albert S., m. Eliza A. Cole, whose children are two. — Charles Albert and Mary Salisbury.
 - 2. Benjamin D. Allen, m. Eliza F. White. Their children are Mabel, James White, Eliza Salisbury, and Charlotte Joy.
- VI. Martha B. has two children, George M. and Laura A.
- VI. Zlisha D., youngest son of Elisha Allen, had five children, Alfred [in the U.S.N.], Charles D., Caroline M., Mary E. T., and Martha L.; m. Edward Fay, of Cambridgeport.

GOLDEN WEDDING OF ELLIS AND LUCY ALLEN.

Yours Truly Ellis Allen

ACCOUNT

OF THE

CELEBRATION OF THE GOLDEN WEDDING OF ELLIS AND LUCY ALLEN.

It had long been the intention of the children of Ellis and Lucy Allen to celebrate, in an appropriate manner, the Golden Wedding of their parents. Accordingly, an invitation was extended to numerous members of the family to repair to the old homestead, which has been in the uninterrupted possession of the Allens through seven generations, and assist in the ceremonies.

As it was found impossible to include all the relatives on both sides of the house, the invitation was limited to the immediate descendants, and to the brothers and sisters of the Bride and Bridegroom, with their families. Among these, some were in California, some on the Mississippi, and some serving their country in the army and navy. Altogether, the number of invitations given was over four hundred.

A heavy snow-storm set in, the day before the wedding; and its severity was such, that many friends were prevented from being present, while some drove as much as twenty-five miles in an open sleigh. The unpromising weather, however, was not allowed to interrupt the preparations for the ceremonies; and the daughters of the house were busy, for several days, decking its antique rooms in robes of velvet moss and trailing evergreen. One particular apartment, divested of its modern furnishings, was made the receptacle of sundry heirlooms. The black-visaged stove gave place to the cheerful light of a blazing fire of wood, piled upon brass-knobbed andirons; and the blackened crane, with its pot-hooks of varying lengths, and singing teakettle, recalled the scenes of bygone days. Tallow candles, in shining candlesticks, with their accompanying snuffers, adorned the shelf; while over the mantel was hung a musket bearing date 1770, and, though years of rust had dimmed its early lustre, it was all aglow with memories of Bunker Hill and Lexington. An ancient tea-sett, dating back four generations, was displayed upon the wooden shelves; and ranged beside it were the pewter plates, whose brightness was the pride of the ancient housekeeper. The spinning-wheel and its accompaniments graced the room, as of old; and rich ears of corn, with braided husks, hung on the walls. Straight-backed chairs — and one particular rocker, which had lulled to infant slumber not a few of the Allens - helped to complete the furnishing of this really ancient room.

At ten o'clock of the eventful day, the guests began to assemble, and were cordially received by William C., the oldest son of the house. An hour was spent in social interchange, and the presentations of many beautiful and useful gifts, which quite overloaded the old-fashioned table, itself a part of the simple outfit of the bride of fifty years ago.

At half-past eleven, the meeting was called to order by George E., the second son, who acted as master of ceremonies, and who welcomed the friends in the following address:—

"My Friends, — We have assembled beneath the hospitable roof of this old family mansion, this 'Home' of the Allens, to celebrate the 'Golden Wedding' of our honored parents; and I desire for myself, but more especially for them, to bid you a cordial, hearty welcome.

"We trust you have brought to-day joyous and gladsome spirits, for we desire to make the occasion one of rejoicing; and, though sad reminiscences may unbidden well up from hearts overflowing with gratitude, let them serve only as the shading of the picture, to heighten and render more apparent its beauties. The Bride and Groom of April 11, 1814, are of the sixth generation of Allens who have owned and occupied this ancestral estate, and they greet to-day, under its ample roof, almost an unbroken family of children, - no absent one save a loved daughter, who died in youth; and who can say but her sweet spirit, so early transplanted, hovers around us at this moment, bringing down the benediction of heaven, to hallow and purify our joy! Five brothers and one sister of the family of the Groom, the voungest of whom bears upon his head the frosts of more than threescore winters, meet to-day. One, only, is absent, - an unfortunate brother, bereft of reason.

"But I must not dwell upon reminiscences, be they sad or joyous; for our numerous friends who have honored us by their presence, despite the inclemency of the weather, have, for our Host and Hostess, words of congratulation. In our immediate family, no death has occurred for thirty-seven years; hence, come to-day five sons and two daughters, bringing their sheaves with them. Twenty grandchildren, buds of beauty, accompany us; and we twine them into a living wreath to-day, to crown the heads that yet stand erect under the weight of threescore and ten years.

"Again, I bid you a cordial welcome to the joys and festivities of this pleasant occasion."

At the close of these remarks, a troop of grandchildren, of the eighth generation, came in, with a song of greeting; who, after giving and receiving each a kiss from their grandparents, dispersed among the older guests. A prayer of invocation was offered by Rev. S. Bush, pastor of the church in which the family has worshipped for many generations; after which, the company joined in singing the following hymn, to the grand old tune, "St. Martins:"—

"Let children hear the mighty deeds Which God performed of old."

The company was then invited to listen to an address, prepared for the occasion by Rev. Dr. Allen, of Northboro', "the oldest living person born upon this spot, and the first among the Allens who received the honors of 'Old Harvard.'"

During the reading of the address, in which the doctor set forth so eloquently the remarkable traits of the ancestry on the father's side, it became evident that no notice was to be taken of the mother's pedigree; and as Joseph A., her third son, who is said to inherit many of her traits of character, was called upon, he responded in a happy sketch of her ancestry, tracing her descent, on both sides, directly from the "Mayflower;" and indulged in a humorous comparison of the merits of the Allens and Lanes. The pleasant repartee to which this gave rise, between the Rev. Doctor and the speaker, was the source of much amusement.

It was pleasant to see among the guests the venerable form of Colonel Obed Allen,—the oldest man present, nearly ninety years of age. Three of the guests of the wedding fifty years before were present; and also several of Mr. Allen's early schoolmates,—among them, Hon. Joseph Breck, of Brighton, whose benignant face seemed to show the sweet influence of the flowers which have been his companions for many years. In response to the call of the chairman, he made some pleasant allusions to the scenes of their early days.

Rev. Asa S. Allen, — who had journeyed fourteen hundred miles to celebrate this marriage-feast, — being called upon, responded in appropriate remarks.

Nathaniel T., the fourth son, here presented, with appropriate remarks, and read, letters of congratulation from William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Samuel J. May, Dr. Lowell Mason, Rev. Warren Burton, and others, who were unable to be present.

The following hymn, written for the occasion by one of the nephews, — T. Prentiss Allen, of New Bedford, — was read by him, and sung by the company: —

"Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken."

O God! thy presence we entreat,
As with our children here we come,
Each fond, familiar face to greet
In this our dear ancestral home.

Before this family altar bowed,
Our fathers raised their prayers to thee;
Here pledged their loyal faith, and vowed
To live for truth and liberty.

For fifty years, thy servants here
Have shared in love what thou hast given:
Each gladdening joy, each bitter tear,
Has brought them nearer thee and heaven.

For all these blessed years have brought;
For children here or called above;
For mercies granted, lessons taught,—
We give thee thanks, O God of Love!

So, when, upon this happy day,

They pledge anew their love of old,
Bless them with thy rich grace, we pray,
And in thy tender arms enfold.

And when is loosed the silver cord,
And broke at last the golden bowl,
Grant them with thee, O gracious Lord!
Th' eternal marriage of the soul.

The chairman then called upon James T., who, he said, though the youngest of the family, was considered old enough to speak for himself. He responded to the call, in a happy vein. A concluding prayer was then offered by Rev. Asa S. Allen, the brother from Wisconsin.

But before we left this feast of reason and true flow of soul, to partake of more substantial entertainment, it was whispered around that the impartial Muse had paid a visit to another guest; which, coming to the ear of the chairman, a demand was made upon Joseph Henry Allen, of Cambridge, another nephew, who gave this generous tribute to the family:—

GOLDEN WEDDING, APRIL 11, 1864.

Full fifty years have come and gone, their pleasure and their pain, Since Ellis Allen carried home his young bride, Lucy Lane; Their green spring then, their autumn now, so golden and serene, And many a long, bright, sultry summer working-day, between. Those years have laid their hand upon the bridegroom and the bride.

Frosty, but kindly; and, with days, their joys are multiplied.

Their children come to hear the words of plighted love again, —
Their daughters wedded matrons both, their sons five bearded men.

Their children's children gather too, and younger faces show
The joy and hope that entered here, just fifty years ago.

Some days were merry, some were sad, — their sunshine dashed with tears:

Yet dearer than the bride of youth, the wife of fifty years.

But, touch us no'er so lightly, Time is sure to write his mark:
The merry village boy has grown a sober patriarch;
Gray hairs fringe scantily, where lay the locks of sunny brown;
The white beard gathers round the face, then smooth with boyish down:

The ruddy cheeks are furrowed with the lines of time and care;
The wide brow shows the histories that Life has written there.
But eye, lip, voice, and hand have kept the dear old mother-tongue,

True love is never out of date, the heart is always young!

Swiftly the generations pass: now, gathered here, we see Seven goodly branches, bearing fruit, from this ancestral tree,— New England's sons and daughters all, — once more together come,

To join this glad festivity, to greet this harvest-home.

The first, our model working-man, — a man of health and cheer; Broad-chested, bearded, brown, — machinist, farmer, engineer. A good and gentle name he bears, one ne'er dishonored yet, — Our William Cowper, with his wife, our loving Harriet. His family of children, too, a long and fair array, — Eight sturdy boys, two rosy girls, — salute us here to-day.

Then George, so strong and wise and good, so generous and kind, We knew him in our boyish games, and still shall ever find. He cannot have an enemy; and no one ever heard One mean or cruel thing of him, one hard or angry word. To something like a dozen boys, a father, true and mild; And his and Susan's heart had room for one more orphan child.

A vaster family comes next; but never it annoys
The easy-tempered, cool, clear Head of some five hundred boys.
His tact and skill we know of old, — his music too, and fun;
Our Christmas sports must always wait for Joseph Addison.
Large-brained and shrewd, yet prompt and firm, quick-witted and alert:

Here are his girls, and here his frank, kind, cordial Lucy Burt.

Our Lucy next we greet, so dear, so womanly and true;
Now mistress of this pleasant home, — old home, but duties new.
We open all our hearts to her; we know her chequered life, —
The sorrows of the mother and the longing of the wife;
We weep that pure and noble heart, that young, proud, manly will:

Alas, our martyr-boy! alas, the field of Chancellorville!

Then Abby, dear, warm heart! between two good old Scripture names,—

The Apostle and the Israelite, — Nathaniel and James; The cunning hand to organize, the genius that creates, — No partners in a better work were ever better mates. It needs no word of praise from us; — the shrewdness, sense, and skill;

The busy, patient, scheming brain; the fixed and stubborn will; The tact and industry and thrift; the system and the rule. That wisely built and steadily maintain West-Newton school.

Forget we not to own, besides, the fortune that combines With theirs the patient skill of our two sister Carolines; The wifely tact and tenderness, 'mid cares that still increase, Which gives a home and mother's heart to twenty boys apiece!

The list above gives all except the daughters' husbands' names; — The Davises, — the citizen, and soldier; Charles, and James.

We hail the day: while far away the war-clouds darkly lower, We greet the sunshine of the Past; we catch the golden hour. We bless the kindly Providence that guards us still from harm; God bless the noble old Bay State! God bless the ALLEN FARM!

The family seemed to need no more: early friends had gladdened the hour with pleasant reminiscences; brothers and cousins had poured out their offerings of gratitude and love; gray-haired men and venerable women had given their presence, with hearts beating responsive to the occasion; and the pleasant odors of old Java were inviting the attention to things which cheer the inner man. Accordingly, the company was divided into those over fifty, and those under that age. The older ones were escorted to the dining-room, where the generously spread table only waited for the bride to place the knife in the beautiful loaf that graced its centre, to dispense its bounties. An animated discussion of these good things made the venerables willing to give place to the younger party: and, by the time they, in their turn, had done like justice to the entertainment and themselves, the hour for departure had arrived; and, with warm congratulations, and fervent wishes for the future, — some with smiles, and some with tears, — the company departed.

Those who were left in the old home of seven generations gathered about its cheerful hearthstone, and recounted the pleasant sayings and doings, and all the circumstances which had conspired to make this the most memorable day of their lives, — a day the like of which may not shed its light upon either of the generations that participated in these festivities.

ADDRESS.

THE long-expected day has come; and, in the name of our hosts, and of those who have been instrumental in providing for this festive occasion, I bid you welcome to the old hive, which has sent out so many swarms to occupy other, and it may be richer, fields, to "gather honey from every opening flower."

By a happy coincidence, of which we were not apprised till a few days since, the Golden Wedding falls on the same month, and nearly on the same day, as the centennial of the birth of Phineas Allen, the father of the bridegroom, as also of the father-in-law of him who addresses you, Dr. H. Ware, Sr.; the one having been born April 24, and the other April 1, 1764.

It will be understood, therefore, that we celebrate by this observance both events, — the wedding of the son, fifty years, and the birth of the father, a hundred years ago.

I propose, in this address, to give a sketch of the early history of the prolific family of the Allens of Medfield, which I hope will not be without interest to the connections, near and remote, whom the occasion has brought together this day, and to other members of the great family we represent.

The paterfamilias,—in Scripture phrase, "the goodman of the house,"—whose Golden Wedding we are met to celebrate, is a lineal descendant, of the sixth generation, of James Allen, an emigrant from some part of the island of Great Britain, probably of Scottish descent, who became a freeman in the town of Dedham in the year 1647. Dedham at first embraced an extensive territory, forming, at the present time, the towns of Medfield, Walpole, Wrentham, Dover, and Needham. James Allen was one of the company of proprietors to whom were assigned allotments of land in that part of Dedham which, in 1650, was incorporated by the name of "Medfield," or "Meadfield," in allusion to the extensive meadows bordering on Charles River, which forms the western boundary of the town.

I find, among the old papers which have been preserved in an oaken desk now in my possession, the following document, without date, but which appears to have been the first grant of land now constituting the old homestead. The forms of the letters and the whole appearance of the document indicate an early date:—

"Meadfield granteth to James Alin six Acres of Upland that lieth on the north plaine, Abutting toward the west on Stony Winter Brook, against the lands of Thomas Wight, and on the waste lands on all other parts.

"Hen. Adams."

This six-acre lot probably included the site of the house in which we are now assembled, and extended to the small stream forming its western or rather southwestern border, characteristically termed in the grant "Stony Winter Brook," as the ground through which it runs is literally paved with stones, and as the stream, though considerable in winter, almost disappears in summer. It is likely, however, that this, like most watercourses, was much larger before the forests were cleared away than we find it at the present time. It probably continued in a visible form till it reached "Home-Meadow Brook," so called, forming a welldefined boundary all the way through. The land on the other side of this small stream, now belonging to the homestead, was annexed long afterwards; the orchard purchased, of Colonel Johnson Mason, in the early part of this century, the pasture fifty or sixty vears since.

We have no means of knowing what were the dimensions of the farm during the lifetime of James, the original proprietor. Undoubtedly, it was enlarged, from time to time, by additional grants and purchases, till it became a good-sized, though never a very large farm.

As there was "a cooper's-shop" standing in the time of King Philip's war, we conclude that our progenitor James Allen followed the humble but respectable occupation of a cooper, having learned the trade probably in the old country; in which profession he was followed by his youngest son, Joseph, and I believe his grandson Noah, who in succession inherited the home-place and the cooper's-shop. I do not know whether this shop was taken down, or removed to another place. Some of us remember well the old cellar where it stood, as I think we helped to fill it up with stones and earth.

We learn, from tradition in the family, that it was from this cooper's-shop that the Indians, under King Philip, in 1676,—on their way from Marlboro' to Medfield, which they laid in ashes,—took shavings, which they placed on the floor of the dwelling-house, setting it on fire, and then hurrying on to the village. Fortunately, the shavings were placed on a trap-door leading into the cellar; and the door having been consumed, and having fallen into the cellar, the fire was extinguished without farther harm.

It was a few years before this calamity, that Rev. John Allin, of Dedham, — a cousin of James, as we learn from a clause in his will, viz., Aug. 26, 1671, — died, "after an easy sickness of ten days," according to Cotton Mather, at the age of 75, having been born in 1596. "His beloved wife Katherine," as he calls her in his record, died three days after, and they were both buried in the same grave. She was his second wife, the widow of Governor Thomas Dudley, and was married to Rev. John Allin, Nov. 8, 1653, three months after the Governor's death, and a little more than six months after the death of Mr. A.'s first wife. They had three sons, — Benjamin, Daniel, and Eliezer; names preserved in other branches of the family.

Rev. John Allin and his wife Margaret came from Wrentham, County of Suffolk, England.

John, the oldest son of James Allen, was born in Dedham, Dec. 4, 1639, ten years before a settlement was made in that part of the town now Medfield. This settlement was "at a place nigh Bogastow," the Indian name of the interval on Charles River lying between Medfield on one side, and Medway and Sherborn on the other.

It has been, from time immemorial, a tradition in all branches of the family, that James and Anna Allen were emigrants from Scotland. There must have been some grounds for this universal belief. What has led me of late to doubt its correctness is that Rev. John Allin, the first minister of Dedham, — who, in his last will and testament, bequeathed a small legacy to his cousin James Allen, of Medfield, — came from England, and not Scotland; and, besides, I am not aware that any emigrants from Scotland were among the first settlers of Massachusetts colony.

Still, it must be admitted that traditions like this have some foundation in fact; and it is not unlikely, that, as I have already suggested, James or his wife, or both, were of Scottish extraction, and that they first went to England before embarking for this country. I shall be glad if we can find further evidence in confirmation of the tradition, which we have been accustomed to regard as quite satisfactory, — that the prolific family of the Allens of Medfield have the good old Covenanter blood running in their veins.

A brief account of the house and its surroundings, as they appeared in our boyhood at the beginning of this century, may not be uninteresting to the younger members of the family.

It was an old-fashioned, unpainted house of two stories, with a large chimney in the centre, the only ornament being a Doric scroll over the front door; the western part forming what is now the eastern part of the building, including the front room and bedroom, the door being in the centre, at what is now the southeast corner of the house. This part was occupied by our grandparents Noah and Sybil Allen, his third wife.

The other part of the house stood nearer the road; at the south-east corner of which was the well, with its curb and sweep and "moss-covered bucket;" near which stood the large horse-block, from the top of which we mounted the old bay mare, father on the saddle, mother on the pillion behind, and one of us boys, without saddle or pillion, riding before, astride the neck of the patient and good-natured beast, that, without complaint, bore her precious load to the village church, something more than a mile distant. To the north of the well and horse-block, extending to the barn-yard, was a grassplot and garden, with peach-trees and a bed of fennel near the road; and farther west, partly occupied at the present time by the kitchen and out-buildings, was the kitchen-garden, with a square bed in the centre filled with gay tulips and the gaudy peony, and other herbs and flowers for use and ornament.

On part of the space between the kitchen-garden and the road were several clumps of the pretty shrub, the privet, so common in England, which with us went by the name of "prim-bushes," and which were used as a substitute for clothes-lines.

The barn stood on the same spot that it now occupies, with its sloping yard in front, and stacks of meadow-hay in the rear.

A few of us can remember the huge white-oak tree which stood on the opposite side of the road, and with what delight we children used to gather the ripened mast after a north-east storm in October, which we laid up for winter use, and which we thought almost as delicious as chestnuts. The trunk had been for many years a mere shell, when, during a violent gale, it fell, and great was the fall thereof; and great was our grief at the thought that it would yield no more its accustomed fruit.

I must not forget, nor pass by in silence, the old chestnut-tree, which stood, with its huge trunk and majestic arms, at the edge of the rock in the "Upper Orchard," as it was called, which was full six feet in diameter, and whose giant arms were stretched out over an area whose circumference could not have been much less than two hundred feet. We sometimes gathered from this single tree, on the morning following a severe storm of wind, from ten to fifteen quarts of its savory fruit.

We remember, too,—and the thought makes our mouths water,—we remember—oh, how could we forget?—the then long-lived peach-trees, laden every season with their luscious fruit,—three standing in a row in the Upper Orchard, and others near the house. Then the peach-tree knew neither the borer, nor that incurable disease the yellows. Then it flourished like other trees of the orchard, and seldom did it fail of yielding its fruit in its season.

A few other fruit-trees, coeval with the second generation at least, if not of the first, claim a moment's notice; and, among them, chief may be reekoned a gigantic pearmain, standing just below the cooper's shop above mentioned, near the edge of the upland, which was our main dependence for winter fruit. The trunk was hollow as long ago as I can remember, and several persons—at least, several boys—could find shelter at the same time within its cavity. One of its huge arms stretched out towards the house, to the distance of thirty or forty feet, as if to claim kindred and fellowship with the departed occupants of the house, by whom it had been planted,—probably transplanted from the English home,—and who, in the days of its youthful vigor, had gathered its ripened fruit.

And there, below the barn-yard, stood the aged trunk, with a few scattered branches, — the old appletree, called, by way of distinction, — for its rich flavor and exceeding beauty, of a bright-red color, — "the Governor;" and not far from it, and also in the orchard east of the house, flourished, in a green old age, some half-dozen specimens of the Seekonk sweeting, — a winter-apple excellent for baking, and which received its name, as we suppose, from Seekonk, R.I., from which place the patriarch Joseph, son of James, who inherited the old homestead, took his wife Hannah Sabine, and by whom he became the father of a numerous offspring.

And now let us follow the line of descent from our common progenitors James and Anna his wife, down to our friends who, in this old home and on this anniversary, renew the marriage-vows and solemn pledges mutually given and received just fifty years ago this day.

James Allen by Anna his wife, both emigrants from the Old World, had nine children; viz., John, James, Nathaniel, William, Benjamin, Martha, Mary, Sarah, and Joseph. The youngest of the sons was Joseph, born June 24, 1652, who, about 1675, married Hannah Sabine, of Seekonk, whose brother William had taken Joseph's sister Martha for his wife.

Joseph greatly enlarged, by purchase, the estate he inherited from his father, and appears to have been a man of energy and influence. As he increased in substance, so he was blessed with a numerous offspring, for whom he made provision as the sons arrived at man's estate, as also by his last will and testament, a copy of which is still preserved.

By this will, he made his son Noah the heir of the old homestead, and, among other legacies, bequeathed to his two sons Daniel and David a hundred acres of land, lying near Woodstock, Conn., and called by the Indian name "Massamoquit."

One of the sons, Nehemiah, settled, with some of the younger branches of the family, in Sturbridge; two others, Hezekiah and Eleazer, in Dover. One, Jeremiah, was killed by the Indians.

Numerous descendants of these three brothers may be found in those places, and others are scattered over different parts of the land.

Noah married Sarah Gay, of Dedham, by all accounts a woman of uncommon strength of character and capacity for business; qualities for which there was, in her case, special need, as her husband, for some years during the latter part of his life, was harmlessly but incurably insane. The care of the children and the management of the estate devolved upon her, and she showed herself equal to the task, ruling her household well, and directing her affairs with discretion.

She outlived her husband many years, and died in 1782, at the age of ninety; so that she was remembered by many who were living half a century since, from some of whom I learned the facts which I have just narrated.

Noah died 1755, having just completed the term of threescore years and ten.

The next in succession, of the fourth generation, of those who lived on this spot, and inherited the estate, was Noah Allen, Jr.; of whom some of us have a distinct and vivid recollection, as he died in 1804. He was a tall, and in his prime a strong, athletic man; of whom it is related, that, in a trial of strength, with a horse for an antagonist, each competitor pulling at the end of a common cart-rope, the rope snapped in two, and neither party won the prize.

He was born in 1719, according to the record kept by Rev. Joseph Baxter, the second minister of Medfield, and accordingly was eighty-five at the time of his death.

Noah, by right of primogeniture, being the oldest son, inherited a double portion of his father's estate; a custom or law borrowed from England, and which continued in force till 1780.

Noah Allen, Jr., by his first wife, Miriam Fisher, had five sons, — Asahel, Fisher, Silas, Gad, and Nathan. Gad — whose Bible name, "a troop cometh," was given in reference to a troop of horsemen that passed through the town at the time of his birth — died in infancy.

Asahel died in early manhood, leaving three sons and one daughter.

Of the other sons, Silas died at the age of eightyfour and six months; Fisher and Nathan, both at the age of ninety-five.

By his second wife, Abigail Ellis, he had one daughter, Miriam, — the kind-hearted, open-handed, whole-souled aunt, whose ample dimensions and sunny smiles and kindly greetings and motherly love are well remembered by the troops of nephews and nieces that were accustomed to visit her at her hospitable roof.

On April 24, 1764, the mother gave birth to a son, who received the Bible name, according to the custom of those days, of Phineas; the fifth in the order of succession that inherited the old homestead. The mother died the following summer (July 28), leaving her infant of three months to the care of others. Fortunately, the grandmother, Sarah [Gay] Allen, was still living, and by her watchful care supplied, as well as a grandmother could, the place of a mother to the infant child. The grandmother was spared to the great age of ninety years, at which time the motherless child was a young man of eighteen, a soldier in the continental army, in which he had enlisted at the early age of sixteen. He was at West Point at the time of Arnold's treason and the execution of the ill-fated Major André, and he shared in the privations and terrible sufferings that our army experienced in "the Jerseys." He returned at the close of the war, in a miserable plight, having marched the whole distance of two or three hundred miles on foot.

The other sons of Noah having been provided for, Phineas, the youngest of the family, married, and lived in the home-place, occupying the easterly end of the house, next to the street. Here all the children, excepting our youngest brother, first saw the light.

Our father married Oct. 22, 1787 (at the age of 23), Ruth, second daughter of Asa Smith, of Walpole, then only eighteen years old, to whose affectionate solicitude and untiring labors and watchful tender care we owe a debt of gratitude that we can never repay, and for which her children rise up and call her blessed.

We take a melancholy pleasure in recalling and recounting the pains taken by our honored parents to instil into our youthful minds good principles, — the love of truth, reverence for things sacred; to bring us up in habits of industry and sobriety; to encourage us in our desire to gain knowledge. We must not forget the sacrifices they made, the hardships they underwent, to gain the means for supporting three sons through a college course; the mother, especially, laboring beyond her strength, at unseasonable hours, and without much help except from the older children, — filling the place of mother and nurse, of seamstress and cook, and maid-of-all-work; often weary, but never disheartened; never thinking that she had done enough, while any duty remained unfulfilled.

Of the eight children, one, the first-born, — the sister who led me by the hand when first I was sent, a little child of four years, to the village-school, and whose sweet but somewhat grave countenance I can perfectly recall, — was taken from us at the age of seven, the victim of "the throat-distemper," as it was called; a disease which prevailed in the neighborhood, and proved fatal to many. The other children of the household, three in number, in turn took the disease; and one, our brother, for whom especially this anniversary is kept, barely escaped with his life.

As soon as the nature of the disease was known, we were all sent from home, and tlid not return till some time after the funeral; but I well remember how they brought us to the window, to look in upon the changed countenance of our sister and playmate, as laid out for burial. It was my first view of death, as it was the first great grief experienced by the bereaved parents; and the impressions it made were not soon effaced.

With this exception, all the children of Phineas and Ruth Allen have been spared to this day; and most of them, with the children whom God has given them, are present to join in this celebration. "Having obtained help of God, we continue to this time:" bearing marks of declining age indeed, but retaining a good share of health and vigor; and surrounded by blessings more than we can number, for which we owe our Maker and Preserver, our Heavenly Father and Friend, our fervent gratitude, our everlasting praises.

GOLDEN WEDDING OF GERSHOM AND ABIGAIL ADAMS.

GERSHOM AND ABIGAIL ADAMS.

THE Golden Wedding of GERSHOM and ABIGAIL [ALLEN] ADAMS was celebrated at another of the old homesteads of Medfield, Nov. 12, 1868. The day was propitious, and a large company assembled, consisting of the children and grandchildren of the Bridegroom and Bride, and numerous relatives and friends, from places more or less remote, to whom invitations had been extended. Of the six brothers of Mrs. Adams, all but one were present; and only distance prevented the sixth (Rev. A. S. Allen, now living in Iowa) from joining the company. One of the sons, living in California, was necessarily absent. With this exception, all the descendants of the parties were gathered under the paternal roof, all rejoicing in health and prosperity. Alas! little did we think, that, within three short weeks, two of the guests, a nephew and a grandson (Rev. T. P. Allen and George Frederick Adams), would be called away, — the one at the noon, the other in the bright morning of life.*

^{*} Rev. T. Prentiss Allen died Nov. 26, aged 46; George Frederick Adams died Dec. 6, aged 19.

After prayer by Rev. Mr. Bush (their former pastor), a number of letters from absent friends were read; among them, one in rhyme from Joseph A. Allen, of Fredonia, N.Y., filled with amusing reminiscences.

A hymn, written for the occasion by T. Prentiss Allen, was then sung; followed by an address from Rev. Dr. Allen, giving some history of the family of the Bridegroom, which had inhabited this spot for more than two hundred years.

A humorous description of the old homestead and the pleasant life there was next given, in verse, by Rev. J. H. Allen; a song, written for the occasion by George E. Allen, was sung by him with his brothers and sisters; and addresses from several friends present closed the exercises. Our friends received many valuable gifts; among which was a beautiful engraving of the "German Golden Wedding," presented by the neighbors and friends.

It was a delightful occasion, and long to be remembered by those who had the good fortune to be present, and share in the festivities.

HYMN, BY T. P. ALLEN.

Accept, O God! our grateful love, —
The hallowed joy of this glad hour;
Thy peace brood o'er us as a dove,
Thy Spirit move us by its power.

Blest day!—the light of fifty years,—
When man and maid pledged faith and truth;
When wed, 'mid joy and sacred tears,
The beauty and the strength of youth.

The bloom of beauty fadeth fast, —
Man's youth and strength soon pass away:
Immortal love for aye will last,
More pure and true from day to day.

The undoubting faith, that years increase;
The hope and love, which ills control,—
These hallow life, and give sweet peace,—
The Golden Marriage of the soul.

Thy children, Father, praises bring,
For grief, for joy; for toil, for rest;
And more, — for glorious hopes that spring
Eternal from the trustful breast.

When time for them shall be no more,
And known no more the ways they trod,
Grant them, true wed, above to soar,
And rest in thy dear arms, O God!

THE OLD HOUSE: AS HER NIECE MARY REMEMBERS IT.

TO MY AUNT, ON HER GOLDEN WEDDING.

I remember, I remember, — it is years and years ago, —
The old brown house; the meadows, where the river ran below;
The old elm-trees; the old gray barn; that old red horse the while,

Behind whose honest flanks I rode full many a dusty mile;
The old oak bucket in the well; the clear, cold draughts it drew;
Those sunny rooms, so snug and low, and hospitable too;
The quaint old kitchen, neat as wax; the bright old hickory blaze;
The old wide-throated chimney-place, that warmed those good old

The pots and kettles on the crane; the doughnuts simmering

While by the firelight sat "old Gran'ther Adams" in his chair;

The comfortable settle, and the chimney-corner seat,
Where George and Charley crowded in, all ruddy with the heat;
The great, uneven hearthstone, and the great old fire-dogs,—
Such huge hot fires I never saw, nor such great piles of logs!

I remember, I remember, on those pleasant winter days,
Before the sun above the hill could lift his earliest rays,
The breakfast done, the men at work, the boys all off at school,
The table cleared, the kitchen swept, I took my little stool,—
Then such a nice and cosey day, there by my dear aunt's side,
While songs she sang, and stories told, and busy fingers plied.
The day was never weary, from late sun to early shade;
And very proud was I to finish ten straw yards of braid!
The storm might beat, with wind and sleet, against the windowpanes;

The snow might drift, all wild and swift, along the narrow lanes: But, safe from storm, all bright and warm and merrily went the day;

And fast my winter visit passed, — too soon it passed away.

I remember, I remember, then, the glorious baking-days; The great round oven, roaring hot; the pitchy pine-wood blaze, -An oven big enough to hold five hundred loaves of bread! -None of the little iron boxes now we see instead. Fifteen great sticks we burnt to coal, then swept the coals all out; Then earthen pots and baking-pans distributed about, As thick as ever they could stand on that vast oven floor; Well banked with embers glowing hot the heavy iron door, That opened when the work was done; and there, all steaming, lay The fragrant, hot, and wholesome spoils of that triumphant day: -The great brown crusty loaves; the flaky mince and apple pies; And custards, sweet and delicate, that met our hungry eyes. Of all the dainties e'er I saw, those were the daintiest; Of all good things, I always loved Aunt Abigail's the best, -Unless it was Aunt Lucy's, - for I never quite could tell Whose table I was fondest of, I loved them both so well! And when, from one house to the other, either way I passed, As nearly as I recollect I always chose the last!

I remember, I remember, too, my younger cousins three, — John Quincy, years and years before he ever went to sea.

Poor fellow! by his mother's side he always had to stay,
Or else beside the kitchen fire to keep his cough away;
And learned all sorts of household skill, and culinary arts,
Which did him such good service when he lived in foreign parts.
Where is he now? Since I have heard, 'tis many a long year:
'Twould help bring back those good old days, if we could see him here.

And pale and serious cousin James, who grew to seventeen,
Then went, and left an aching void where his young life had been.
The weary, weary months and days he faded still, and pined,—
The fears that went before, and then the sorrow left behind.
And little cousin Robert, too, whom I remember well;—
How promising and beautiful I wish that I could tell;
How much was gathered up in him of hope and pride and joy;
How everybody knew and loved the darling little boy.
A bitter thing it is to see our youngest taken so:
One more bright star in heaven, but a lonelier life below.
But Time deals gently still, and dries the mother's tears that fall:
'Tis better to have loved and lost, than never love at all!

And Time has dealt with all of us since those old childish days:
Our tracks in life grow widening out; we walk our different ways;
Wall Street, or farm, camp, hospital, oil-wells or Turkish baths,
Ships, mines, and battle-fields bedeck our several chosen paths.
The group of cousins, once so near, in life are scattered wide,
As cares and gains and toils and pains with years are multiplied.
All the more precious to our hearts the love that changes not;
The pleasant memories that crown this hospitable spot;
The glad reminder of old times; the hope that ever cheers;
The comforts and the cares that wove these fifty golden years.

GOLDEN WEDDING

BY G. E. ALLEN.

Tune, "Bonnie Doon."

Ye hills and plains of Medfield dear, We come to meet you once again: From homes afar, and homes more near, We hail in love this Golden Twain.

We bring glad heart and joyous mind, We leave our cares and toils behind, To celebrate this gladsome day, And gifts upon its altar lay.

To few is given, through fifty years, Such constant joy, so seldom tears; A husband true, devoted, kind; A spirit buoyant, pure, refined;

A voice in song and psalm so clear, Melodious to our youthful ear,— How oft we've run across the plain, To hear anew that sweet refrain!

And now to Heaven our prayer we raise, That health and strength and length of days, The love of children, neighbor, friend, Richly may bless you till the end.

Till then, dear Aunt, and Uncle too, Accept our love, —'tis warm and true; And, while our devious way we're treading, We'll ne'er forget this Golden Wedding.

THE END.
